NATIONAL RECOGNITION OF SCHOLASTIC ACHIEVEMENT

MIT's Women in Technology Program: In a highly competitive nationwide application process, Montrose students have been selected for the past three summers to study at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The program affords students the opportunity to take classes that would not otherwise be offered in high school, such as electrical engineering, computer science and discreet math.

Princeton University's Witherspoon Institute: Montrose students were selected to participate in a week-long seminar for rising high school seniors interested in the classical philosophical tradition and the importance it plays in leading a full moral life.

University of Notre Dame, Center for Ethics and Culture: In six of the last seven years, Montrose seniors were selected to present papers at the University's Annual Fall Conference.
